Dear Mr. Dailey:

On behalf of the U.S. Postal Service (USPS), we want to express our appreciation for your participation on the consensus committee to revise the USPS STD 4-C, the Postal Service standard for wall-mounted centralized mail receptacles.

Your work on the committee was voluntary and included significant sacrifice in time, travel, and effort so that the general public could benefit. The resulting improvement in wall-mounted centralized mail receptacles addressed changes in how today's customers use the mail and anticipated changes in the mail and package industry in the future. Your work, and the changes you fostered, will enhance the mailing experience for millions of people across the country well into the twenty-first century.

In July of 1775, the Second Continental Congress agreed, "A line of posts be appointed under the direction of the Postmaster General" and with those first "line of posts", a communications service for the colonies was born. Today, the USPS continues to provide universal communications service that has bound our nation together for over 200 years. Your workgroup has helped enhance that tradition. Like the work of Louise Nevelson, the new generation of wall-mounted centralized mail receptacles is a legacy that will endure. You can be proud of your service.

We thank you for your contribution.

Sincerely,

William P. Galligan
